Changes in FTE in SREB states declined in all but 2 states: Louislana and Maryland. Research also revealed their increases resulted in legislative funding. These two states also topped the list where changes in state student financial aid funding increased 16.6% and 10% respectively.	presented research statistics showing area demographics, median earnings from no HS diploma or GED up to professional certificates, as well as FTE and enrollment trends in order to provide them with an overview of issues facing our technical college.
3						Functioning in a college advisory capacity, the Local Board identified 3 initiatives to work on for the upcoming year to help the college. 1. Enrollment Committee This committee will research ways to improve and maintain enrollment and FTE. 2. Industry Partnership Committee 3. Disconnect Practice & Theory /Committee

						A Student Success Coordinator/Student Navigator was hired August 2013. This person will be responsible for coordinating and conducting focused academic advising and student support services to help students persist in their programs of study. The Student Navigator will gather statistical information and develop strategies to retain students. She will provide information on targeted career and educational pathways; monitor student attendance, performance, and academic progress; coordinate, track, report and 3						use retention data research and analysis, using Banner, KMS and other resources, to identify obstacles to student achievement and retention.
						Changed admissions policy for Health Science programs. Students must complete certificate program as a prerequisite to being accepted into a medical Implemented QEP - ALMA
						TC will implement a program that will be used system wide called TEAMS-TCSG Early Alert Management System.
						This includes the following modules: User Management, Dashboard, Alert Details (student transcript and alert information), Submit an Alert, Communications (email and comments), Interventions, College Administration functions, TCSG Administration functions, and reporting. We are currently updating our Community Resources guide to include information such as child care centers, churches, civic organizations, health services, housing, social services and community organizations, substance abuse and transportation.

						help students in need of emergency assistance. Som examples include needing books, tuition or help with transportation to stay in school. We are tracking all students in a medical program. The students are monitored on a term basis and grades and progress are examined to identify any areas that may have high failure rates.
						We developed a D,W,F repor posted. It is sent to Instructors that have a 30% unsatisfactory completion of higher. It asks instructors to explain where each student failed and if there was something that could have been done to help the student. It also asks for feedback to make changes in the course to help other students complete it successfully. It helps us to monitor on a term basis any specific classes or any specific areas that result in high failure or withdrawal rates. This report is done for all classes that fall into the unsatisfactory completion rate. This includes the five TCSG identified block STC did not meet the 100% goal on the first attempt for each of the competencies for AY 2014.

					Writing skills appear to be the weakest of the assessed college level competencies in AY 2014.
					Rubrics used in grading this exam should be examined to pinpoint specific areas for future instruction to concentrate on more
					In addition, the increased cost of the Work Keys assessments has led us to the point that we must explore other assessment means.

Three of our 8 counties in our service area remain in the top 25 counties in the state of Georgia in terms of percentage of population unemployed, so these statistics signify that technical education is still a path to employment in our area. Graduate/job placement data is disaggregated by degree, diploma, and/or certificate, by campus and reviewed to determine any trends or concerns. Of the 710 graduates, only 60 were employed in a field unrelated to their program of study. These 60 students are counseled and offered assistance in obtaining other employment, but in many situations, students have gone back to school for a personal goal and are not seeking other employment. The data indicates that there is a strong correlation between our current credit offerings and the needs of our local workforce.
